

races and Daniel Weizman running hot with three seconds in the first three races. After that the winners were spread around, but Craig Smith just kept showing that consistency that brought him to within a few points of Brad at the end of the first day. On the second day Craig started off winning three of the first five races and edged ahead of Brad for the first time. Gary Cameron was also very consistent with good placings but could not win enough first placings.

Unfortunately, Craig had to retire early and the final battle between him and Brad was not to be. Almost every skipper in the fleet won at least one race, which was great, and even first timers Walter Magilton, Ben Harvey and John Bennett sailed through to the finish. Well done guys.
